Food Fete 2010 Thanks To Everyone For Showing Me Your Stuff!

Fete is a French word that means party, festival or celebration and Food Fete is exactly that! A festival of food, a celebration of food, and a way for companies that need some online attention can get it—by mingling and interacting with the media in an exclusive event that only invites media! Food Fete conveniently takes place immediately after the Fancy Food show (both NY and SF versions!) and this years lineup was a true culinary celebration with over 20 companies displaying their wares in a rose colored room with round bar tables and a fancy catering company bringing around mini bites in case we didn't get enough to eat at the Fancy Food show earlier that day.

The room was flushed in pink... Food Fete 2010

Thanks to all the companies for exhibiting and filling up our goody bag with cool items to take home and share with our friends. A few items I didn't get to try because they didn't have a booth at this year's Food Fete are the Stonehouse 27 Indian cooking sauces (that Cashew and cream one looks divine!) and Christopher Ranch Garlic but I know plenty about Christopher Ranch since they are RCA members and hosted my RCA event last summer at their family owned ranch. We had over 50 attendees and a delicious garlic infused dinner, you can read all about that event here!

Lastly, a special honorable mention to Yummy Veggie a website that is trying to help moms get their kids to like vegetables. We need more websites like that out there, we need to eat more vegetables.
